

FOR WINDOW TINT, PPF, CERAMIC & DETAIL SHOPS

The ShopFlow Sales Playbook

How tint, PPF, and detail shops turn ad dollars into deposit-backed jobs, with the real numbers behind every step.

REAL NUMBERS FROM ONE TINT, PPF & CERAMIC SHOP

Your shop doesn't have a lead problem.

It has a what-happens-next problem.

Most owners judge marketing by how many leads come in. The shops that grow judge it by how many of those leads become deposit-backed jobs, and what each one cost. This playbook is everything we learned running ads, landing pages, and lead follow-up for tint, PPF, and ceramic shops, with the real numbers attached.

30 DAYS • ONE 3-INSTALLER TINT, CERAMIC & PPF SHOP

Every booking carries a deposit, and the jobs keep turning into cash: this month the same shop has booked $32K and already collected $24K. We count money when it's collected, not when it's promised.

A NOTE FROM THE FOUNDER

I'm not another agency in another state.

I'm Aidan Woods, founder of ShopFlow, based in Albuquerque. Before ShopFlow I was an acquisition manager at Mercedes-Benz of Albuquerque, where the whole job came down to what this playbook is about: get the customer on the phone fast, follow up until you get an answer, and close.

Today I build ShopFlow's software and run the campaigns for tint, PPF, and ceramic shops myself. I'm in client shops every week. Every number in this playbook comes from a campaign we ran, not an industry average someone made up.

My co-founder Bryce and I only take on a few shops at a time, so we can actually move the numbers for each one. If something in here works for you, I want to hear about it. And if you'd rather have us run it for you, that's exactly what we do.

WHAT SHOPFLOW DOES FOR A SHOP

- Google & Meta ads that bring in quote requests
- Every lead called, followed up, and booked
- Deposits collected at booking
- Fast landing pages for each service
- Calls answered while your guys are installing
- Reports in booked jobs and dollars, not clicks

01 Know your numbers

Most owners estimate. "We do about $30k a month." "Our bays make about $75 an hour." Estimates feel fine until you have to decide where the next $1,000 of ad spend goes. These six numbers tell you, and you can track all of them in a spreadsheet.

METRIC	HOW TO CALCULATE IT	OUR SHOP
Cost per lead	Ad spend ÷ leads	$4.90
Reach rate	Leads you actually talked to ÷ leads	94.6%
Booking rate	Booked jobs ÷ leads	19.6%
Cost per booked job	Ad spend ÷ booked jobs	$25.06
Average ticket	Collected revenue ÷ completed jobs	$448
Collection rate	Money collected ÷ money booked	75%

$250

PER BAY HOUR

The seventh number: revenue per bay hour.

A $2,000 ceramic coating job that took one bay 8 hours earned $250 an hour, more than 3× a $75/hour target. Track it per service and you'll know which jobs your ads should chase.

DO THIS WEEK

- ☐ Tag every lead with where it came from: Google, Meta, website, referral, walk-in.
- ☐ Log booked, completed, and collected separately. They are three different numbers.
- ☐ Write the bay hours on every ticket.

02 Sell the offer, not the vibe

Two Meta ads, one tint shop, same audience, same week. One led with a heat-and-comfort hook. The other led with a concrete offer.

AD A • HEAT HOOK

booked revenue

Cost per lead	$5.41
Leads	7
Jobs booked	0

AD B • OFFER • THE WINNER

$870

booked revenue

Cost per lead	$6.05
Leads	18
Jobs booked	3

The cheaper lead came from the more expensive ad. Judge creative on booked revenue, never on cost per lead.

Small test, 25 leads total. Every campaign we've run since has shown the same pattern.

ANATOMY OF AN OFFER THAT BOOKS

- 1 A concrete freebie with a real price on it
"Free windshield strip with any full tint." Anchor it at your real price ($75–$100).
- 2 Your starting price, in the ad
It screens out price shoppers before they fill out the form.
- 3 A deadline
A date badge gives people a reason to ask for the quote today.
- 4 One trust line
Film type, warranty length, expert installation. Readable mid-scroll.
- 5 One call to action
"Claim your free quote." Not "learn more," not three buttons.

03 Your phone beats a film crew

Same offer, same audience, two videos: one shot on an iPhone in the shop, one professionally produced. The phone video won on both counts.

Video also books better. When one shop swapped a static offer graphic for a short video of the same offer, its first 7 video leads produced 3 booked jobs, about 43% lead-to-booked against roughly 12.5% for the graphic. Small sample, clear direction: go video-first.

THE 12-SECOND SCRIPT • VERTICAL, CAPTIONS ON

0-2 SEC

Local hook

Name your city and the pain. "[City], if your car feels like an oven..."

2-6 SEC

You, in the shop

Standing next to a real customer car. No stock footage.

6-10 SEC

The offer

The freebie and your starting price, said out loud and on screen.

10-12 SEC

One ask

"Fill out the form below." Then stop talking.

- Refresh creative every few weeks. Keep the offer, change the footage.
- Kill any ad that gets clicks but no bookings, however cheap its leads look.

04 One page, one job

Sending ad traffic to your homepage makes a customer hunt for the thing they just clicked on. Give every service its own page whose only job is getting a quote request.

COST PER LEAD

$7.15 → $4.89

dedicated tint page

LOAD TIME

6.72s → 1.14s

a phone

620KB

smaller pages load fast on

THE QUOTE FLOW THAT WORKS: ONE QUESTION PER SCREEN

Easy questions first, contact details last. By the time you ask for a phone number, they've already invested four taps.

EVERY SERVICE PAGE NEEDS

- ☐ One service only: tint, PPF, or ceramic
- ☐ Tap-to-call for people who won't type
- ☐ Film brand and warranty, stated plainly
- ☐ Loads in under 2 seconds on a phone
- ☐ The quote form above the fold
- ☐ Real photos from your bays
- ☐ Reviews from real customers
- ☐ No menu leading people away

05 Google catches demand. Meta creates it.

They are different tools. Run them the same way and one of them will waste your money.

Google Search

People already typing "tint near me"

- Exact-match keywords, so you only pay for searches you want
- One campaign per service, each to its own landing page
- Read the search terms report every week
- Start with your highest-ticket service people search for

Meta

People who weren't shopping yet

- Lead with an offer; they need a reason to act now
- Phone-shot video over graphics
- Starting price in the ad to screen out tire-kickers
- Start with your highest-volume service, usually tint

WHERE GOOGLE MONEY LEAKS

In one shop's inherited Google account, 39 clicks in 28 days went to 14 search terms that never produced a single conversion: "cheap tint near me," "taillight tint near me," cities the shop doesn't serve, services it wasn't selling. Add those as negative keywords the day you find them.

$2,000

FROM ~$270

A ceramic-coating-only, exact-match search campaign spent about $270 on 35 clicks in its first 11 days. It produced one lead: a $2,000 coating job, and the same customer added PPF. On high-ticket services, one lead can pay for months.

06 Win the map for free

When someone searches “window tint near me,” the three shops on the Google map get the calls, and you don’t pay a cent for them. How many reviews you have, how recent they are, and whether you answer them all decide who shows up there.

Get more reviews

- Ask at pickup, while they’re walking around the car smiling
- Text your direct review link within the hour
- Ask them to mention what they got and on what car
- Never pay or discount for reviews; Google can remove them

Answer every one

- Reply within a day, and use their first name
- Name the service in your reply: “Glad you love the ceramic tint”
- Bad review? Stay calm, own it, and take it to a phone call
- Future customers read your replies more than the complaint

REVIEW TEXT • SEND THE SAME DAY AS PICKUP

“Hey [Name], thanks again for trusting us with the [Vehicle]! If you’ve got 30 seconds, a quick Google review about your [Service] helps our small shop a ton: [Review link]”

07 The first shop to call wins

A quote request is a customer comparing shops right now. Our shop reached 94.6% of its leads because every lead got called fast and got at least three tries. Most leads that “ghost” were simply never worked.

THE FOLLOW-UP CADENCE

0-5 MIN

Call, then text if no answer

Speed matters more than anything you say.

DAY 1, PM

Second call

After work hours, when people actually pick up.

DAY 2

Third call + text with their price

Give them the number so they have something to reply to.

DAY 4+

Offer-deadline text, then a check-in later

Leads book late. One of ours booked after the three tries had already run.

FIRST TEXT • COPY AND FILL IN

“Hi [Name], it’s [You] at [Shop]. Got your tint quote request for the [Vehicle]. Full tint starts at [Price], and this week it includes a free windshield strip. What time works for a quick call?”

THE LEAK NOBODY TRACKS: MISSED CALLS

Your installers have film in their hands.

A call that rings out goes straight to the next shop on Google. Set up a text that goes out automatically within a minute of any missed call, and make answering the calls your ads create somebody’s actual job.

“Sorry we missed you, we’re mid-install! What vehicle is it and what are you looking to get done?”

08 Lock it in with a deposit

54/54

BOOKINGS WITH A DEPOSIT

Every job our shop booked came with a deposit. The worry is always that asking for money scares people off. In practice, a customer who won't put down $50 to hold a bay was never going to show up. A flat $50–$100, or about 20% of the ticket, is a good place to start.

WHAT TO SAY ON THE CALL

ASKING

"I've got [Day] at [Time] open. To hold that bay for you, we take a $[Amount] deposit that comes right off your total. I can text you a secure link right now. Want me to send it?"

IF THEY ASK WHY

"We block out the bay and an installer for your car, so we hold the spot with a deposit. It isn't an extra charge; it's part of your price."

IF THEY NEED TO THINK

"No problem. I'll text you the price and the open times. Spots this week usually go fast, so just reply when you're ready."

THREE TEXTS EVERY BOOKING GETS

Confirmation

Day, time, address, what they're getting, and deposit received.

DAY BEFORE

Reminder

Time, how long the job takes, and "reply C to confirm."

AFTER PICKUP

Review ask

The review text from chapter 06, same day.

09 Raise your ticket

More leads is one lever. A bigger average ticket is usually the easier one, because it costs nothing extra in ads.

ADVERTISED FULL-TINT STARTING PRICE

$250 → $475

One shop nearly doubled the starting price in its ads and still booked 54 deposit-backed jobs in 30 days. The price does the filtering, so you stop quoting people who were never going to pay it.

QUOTE FULL FIRST

Front-two-window jobs pull your average ticket down. Quote the full vehicle first and offer front two as the fallback, not the opener.

KEEP PRICE SHOPPERS

Don't lose them to the cheapest shop in town. A budget film line, around 53% gross margin in our numbers, gives them a yes at your shop, and your premium film stays premium.

OFFER THE NEXT SERVICE

Tint → ceramic tint. Ceramic coating → PPF on the front end. The $2,000 coating customer from chapter 05 added PPF in the same visit.

PRICE BY BAY HOUR

If a job ties up a bay for half a day, its price should reflect that. Check every service against your revenue-per-bay-hour target from chapter 01.

$448

average collected ticket in our 30-day data

+$50

per job × 54 bookings = $2,700 more a month, same ad spend

10 Don't let winter empty your bays

Tint demand follows the heat. When it cools off, don't cut the ads and wait for spring. Change what you sell.

WHAT TO PUSH, MONTH BY MONTH

Illustration of a typical pattern. Your own lead sheet from chapter 01 will show your real curve.

SIX SLOW-SEASON PLAYS

Shift ad money to coatings & PPF

Higher tickets, and people search for them year-round.

Sell gift cards in Nov–Dec

"Give them tint for summer." Cash now, installs in spring.

Pre-book spring in February

An early-bird price with a deposit fills your calendar before the heat.

Text your past customers

Tint customers are your best coating and PPF leads, and they cost nothing.

Go after dealer & fleet work

Steady volume that doesn't care what month it is.

Don't forget houses

Residential and commercial window film fills weekday gaps.

11 Your 30-day plan

Don't do it all at once. One week per stage, in this order, and check the boxes as you go.

WEEK 1

Measure

- ☐ Set up a lead sheet: source, date, reached, booked, collected
- ☐ Fix your Google profile and start asking for reviews
- ☐ Calculate your six numbers from chapter 01
- ☐ Start logging bay hours on every ticket

WEEK 2

Offer & creative

- ☐ Write one offer: freebie, starting price, deadline
- ☐ Shoot two 12-second phone videos of it
- ☐ Launch them against your current ad
- ☐ Judge by bookings after a week, not clicks

Page & speed

- ☐ Build one service page with a quote form, or have us build it
- ☐ Test its load time on your phone
- ☐ Point every ad at it
- ☐ Get new-lead alerts on your phone

WEEK 4

Follow-up & ticket

- ☐ Run the chapter 07 cadence and missed-call text
- ☐ Take a deposit on every booking with the chapter 08 script
- ☐ Quote full vehicle first; add a budget tier
- ☐ Recalculate your six numbers and compare

Day 30

Compare your cost per booked job to where you started. That single number tells you whether your marketing is working.
